Lives Where Head Rests.
From the London Chronicle.
Where does a man live when he is on a boundary? The old problem has cropped up again in the revision courts. One revising barrister solved it by ruling in two cases that a man lives in that parish where his front door is situated. But what if the imaginary line run under the middle of the step and come out at the back of the house? Something very like this actually exists at Norwich, in Cheshire, and in each parish. In the end it was held that he was "settled" where his head ("being the nobler part") lay.

A WONDERFUL PLANT DOOMED.

Irrigation Killing Off the Great Cactus That Is Arizona's Flower.

Phoenix Correspondence New York Sun.

The bringing of water to the arid wastes of Arizona and the consequent evolution from desert to garden is causing the extinction of one of the strangest plants in the world. At a recent session of the territorial legislature the Cereus giganteus, the great cactus, better known as the saguaro and peculiar to the soil of this territory, was made the official flower of Arizona. Not many years will elapse before a new choice will be necessary.

When the first Franciscan fathers journeyed north from Mexico into Arizona they carried back reports of the great cactus which covered the plains of the new country, and told about its food value to the Indians. Now, as the art of the American has reclaimed, foot by foot, the former desert, and the magic water has made orange, peach and apricot orchards and great fields of alfalfa, the cactus has been driven out, and only in spots where water cannot be placed can the odd plant be found.

On the rocky, gravelly mesas, the saguaro, the largest of the cactus family, point their candle-like arms straight toward the sky, not infrequently attaining a height of sixty feet. The body of the saguaro, sometimes two or three in thickness, is composed of thin pieces of porous wood, arranged in the form of a Corinthian column, covered and held together by the outside fibers of a mole greater, the distance from the ground large branches put out, while the whole surface is covered with sharp, prickly thorns. A large, white, sometimes purple blossom comes forth early in the spring and ripens into a pear-shaped fruit by the last of June. This fruit, the peyote, is a mixture of raspberry, berry and fig, and is highly prized by both Indians and Mexicans. Part of the fruit is eaten while ripe, and the rest is dried in the sun to make a powder.

Until the advent of the missionaries to the Papago Indian tribe, some twenty years ago, the gathering of the saguaro was the occupation of the great majority of the Indians. From the fruit a highly intoxicating beverage was made. With this the Indians drank themselves into a state of frenzied intoxication. During these Amazonian days of the brave were frequently killed. The saguaro is short-lived, although tradition has given it an age measured by centuries, and usually begins to decay at the base, before attaining its growth. Moisture is fatal to it, and as soon as it receives a constant supply of water it is rapid.

Breeding Wild Animals.

From the New York Tribune.
The number of well managed zoological gardens in this country is increasing, and the collections are becoming more extensive, varied and attractive. Meanwhile, the demand for elephants, giraffes, rhinoceroses, tiger horses, bears, boons, and other notable wild beasts is steadily growing stronger. But the supply from the jungle and the waste places of the earth is, unfortunately, on the wane. It is gratifying to hear, therefore, that the breeding of managable animals in captivity has been practiced with excellent results in recent years. The cages and dens and inclosures may not lack occupants in the future.

Glove Making.

From the London Chronicle.
Most people think that France is the glove-making country par excellence. Germany, however, has the largest number of concerns engaged in the making of leather gloves of any country in Europe, the number being over 1,100. Of these 1,000 are engaged exclusively in the making of kid gloves. There are besides 100 tanneries for the production of leather for the glove trade. There are 85 glove concerns that work exclusively for export. Of the other countries Austria-Hungary has 350; France, 225; England, 180; Italy, 100; and Sweden, 100. Germany and Spain between 50 and 60 glove-manufacturing firms each. Russia has only about thirty. There is in Germany no important glove-making center, the industry being scattered. In Austria the glove-making centers are Prague and Vienna; in France, Paris, Grenoble and Chaumont; in England, London and Worcester; in Italy, Naples, Milan and Turin; in Sweden, Stockholm and Malmö; and in Belgium, Brussels.

Young and Old Fools.

Fidgett, Jr.—"I suppose if young people only knew what fools they were growing into they never would long to become men and women."
Fidgett, Sr.—"And I suppose old folks would never wish themselves young again if they only realized how foolish the youthfulness of most of the young people they know."

CONCESSIONS TO CUBA

EFFECT OF THE DELEGATION'S VISIT ON CONGRESS.

Question of Immediate Action or of Waiting for Arrangement by Treaty.

The visit of the Cuban commercial delegation to Washington in behalf of tariff concessions on Cuban products is expected to attract considerable attention in congressional circles. The republican leaders in the House and Senate will be brought face to face, it is said, with the necessity of action either affirmative or negative in the premises.

The first question to be decided is whether the American protective tariff is to be abated in favor of Cuban agricultural products; the next question, whether that abatement shall be made at once by congressional legislation, or deferred for arrangement by treaty when the Cuban republic is established and has formed its government.

The belief is growing that President Roosevelt will recommend to Congress the most liberal treatment of Cuba consistent with our own economic welfare. It is considered probable that Congress will be guided largely by his recommendation. It is certain that if he should suggest waiting until the new government is formed before granting possible concessions, the high protectionists would gladly seize it as an excuse to postpone action.

Cubans Want Immediate Action.

The Cubans who called upon the President this morning were particular to emphasize the necessity of immediate action upon their petition. They foresaw great commercial disaster if the government waited for the establishment of the Cuban republic. They wanted the President either to act, by virtue of the supposed war power, or ask Congress for authority. Opinion is divided among senators and representatives as to the necessity and advisability of waiting for commercial arrangement by treaty negotiations, which, if a promise of future help will be given, no controversy, however, of the suggestion that Congress should confer authority rather than concessions be proposed through the war power.

Some of the most pronounced protectionists in the Senate are in favor of granting some slight concessions to Cuba not entirely from philanthropic motives, but as an alternative to a growing sentiment in favor of annexation which would, in their opinion, result from prolonging the unfortunate commercial conditions in the island. Annexation would mean absolute free trade utterly objectionable to the protectionists of this country.

Following this to its logical conclusion would place these gentlemen in the ranks of the protectionists. It is not a concession by congressional action. It is by no means certain, however, that such a course will be urged by the protectionists. If a promise of future help will be given, the annexationists for the time, it might answer.

Purely a Business Question.

The entire question is purely a business one, in the opinion of the Senate republican leaders, and will be so treated, they say. It is generally expected that the free trade end of it, will play on the one string of the oppressed Cubans and the shattered industries of the island. Some of the republican leaders realize what a sentiment could be worked up in the United States by such a course, and even possibilities of danger arising therefrom in the next congressional campaign. All these features of the situation will be taken into account and will result in some very serious conferences among the republican leaders.

SKIRTS OF THE FUTURE.

A Prophecy That Twenty Years Hence Knee Dresses Will Be Worn.

From the London Telegraph.

When they are grown up, the young ladies of the future, who were born with this century, will look back with amazement on the manners and dress of the days when their mothers were girls. If M. Octave Uzanne be a true prophet, evolution in things feminine will move, not by degrees, but by remarkable bounds between the present year and 1920. The long dresses of today will appear far more quaint to the girls of that period than do the flounced skirts of the eighties to the mothers of women. In 1920, says M. Octave Uzanne, the "feminine prejudice," which causes ladies, except, of course, in ballets, "to object to displaying the calves of their legs will have become extinct. The long dress, which is the most striking characteristic of the costume as advocated by extremists, will not, however, prevail. The knickerbocker will not oust the petticoat, but the latter will never fall below the knees. On the other hand, the present clinging skirt will be abolished, and dresses will grow fuller in width as they decrease in length. M. Uzanne believes that these revolutionary changes will be promoted by hygienic considerations. He is a violent opponent of the long skirt, on the score of being a microbe collector and distributing agent. In the name of the health, he likewise is persuaded that the corset has but a few years to live, and will in 1920 be preserved, at all, in museums of discarded instruments of torture. Finally, veils will also be tabooed for hygienic reasons, as they act as nets for microbes, which are gathered in their meshes and thence are conveyed to the mouth and eyes.

Suddenly breaking away from health considerations, M. Octave Uzanne indulges in flights of far more fanciful prophecy. In 1920, it seems, occult arts, necromancy and astrology will flourish as they never did before. The art of reading the palm, the Greeks at the commencement of the Christian era, "Astral influence," in which, presumably, M. Uzanne believes, will be an important factor. Genes will be the thing they will dress accordingly. "They will be aware that black predisposes them to Saturnian fancies; that gray devotes them to Mercury, with his gift of pecuniary prosperity; that red places them under the Olympian sway of Jupiter; that golden yellows associate them with the sun, the giver of worldly success, and that, lastly, greenish yellows bind them wholly to Venus and her love philters. The science of planetary influences will, in particular, be strictly followed in evening dresses. In jewelry a similar practice will doubtless be observed. The art of reading the meanings of precious stones, and the study of their respective properties and virtues will be carefully mastered by ladies and consequently by courtiers. Genes will be particularly partial to the Alexandrine period, affirms that the fashions of 1920 in feminine jewelry will be "Neo-Greek."

THE SIBERIAN PENINSULA.

Prospect of Any Nationality May Stake Out Mining Claims.

Tacoma Dispatch to the New York Times.
All of the Siberian peninsula extending into Bering sea and the Arctic east of the 10th meridian, comprising about 67,800 square miles of territory, equal in area to Washington state, will be thrown open for public mining operations next spring. This information was given by Capt. N. L. Johnson of the schooner General Siglin, which returned last week from Nome. He learned the news from Count Podhorski and Commissioner Evanhoff, appointed by the Russian government to visit the district and report on its topography, general characteristics, rivers, mountains, etc. They chartered the Siglin to make the voyage from Nome to the Siberian coast, and to Captain Johnson they divulged the nature of their mission.

The Russian officials completed their trip, secured the necessary data and general information on the Siglin and then came back to the coast. They were met by Count Podhorski and Commissioner Evanhoff, who accompanied them to the coast. They were met by Count Podhorski and Commissioner Evanhoff, who accompanied them to the coast.

BURIAT MONGOLS.
Siberia's Aborigines Resemble North American Indians.
Correspondence of the London News.
We saw clusters of tents exactly like the red Indian tents. They belonged to the aborigines, Buriat Mongols, who are vanishing before the Muscovites as the Redskins are vanishing before the Saxons. When the train halted I had good opportunity for seeing these people. They are first cousins to the Chinese, but all I met were round rather than long, but their cheek bones are prominent. The eye is a warm, good-natured brown. Their skins are not the Chinese sickly sallow, but a ruddy bronze. They are all good-looking men, and had I met them in Nevada I would never have struck them they were not red Indians.

The women folk, however, would have put the right. Without being accused of lack of gallantry, the Indian square is one of the last ladies on earth for whom it would be possible to rouse admiration. They had so unbecomingly and with such much expression as a potato. But these Buriat women are often handsome, with
